Danger of Colds and Grip.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventative of that dangerous disease. It will cure a cold or an attack of the grip in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Geo. C. Stone.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER BEHIND THE BARS

ROBERT THOMPSON SEEMS TO HAVE STARTED OUT TO DO EVERY-BODY.—GOT FIRM HERE FOR TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS.

Robert Thompson, who was arrested in Weston a few days ago, has been taken to Kingwood, where he is in jail.
He was given a hearing on the charge of embezzlement, and in default of bond to answer an indictment by the grand jury was committed by the magistrate.
A short time ago he entered the employ of Brooks, Meade & Co., of this city, and secured sample dress goods to the value of $250. His purpose, however, seemed to be to do the firm and every one else, as a dispatch sent out from Terra Alta makes the following allusion to him:
"He appeared here as a veterinary surgeon, advertised himself extensively and proceeded to skin the farmers who were foolish enough to bring in their horses. He jumped his board and livery bill, and every other bill he could make, as he had done at Kingwood, appropriating the Brooks, Meade & Co.'s goods and then departed for new pastures, leaving his wife here.
"He seems to be a very much wanted man at several points, and can now be found at Kingwood in his happy home awaiting until the June term of circuit court, when in all probability he will be transferred to Moundsville."

VETERANS JOINING

The Association in Goodly Number.
Splendid Address by Major Moore.

James N. David, who was appointed adjutant of the County Veterans Association Saturday afternoon, instead of M. S. Riley, as was erroneously announced, has registered up to this time 109 veterans of the Civil war, who desire membership in the association. He will receive the application of all others who desire to become members, and believes that the organization will reach several hundred. The meeting Saturday afternoon has encouraged those very much who participated, and who started the movement. Among the excellent features of the meeting was an enthusiastic address by Major A. C. Moore. He spoke of the prominent part Harrison county took in the formation of this state and in the Civil war. His address was enthusiastically received and was pronounced one of the best of the day.

WANTS HER NEIGHBOR ARRESTED.
Mrs. Poll Ringer went before Squire Samuel W. Gordon this morning and asked for a warrant for the arrest of Dunkin Bonnell, residing at Pinickin-nick. Bonnell is one of her neighbors, but not of the peaceful sort, if the story be true. She alleges that he employs himself in throwing stones in her yard and sliding down her coal scuttle. There did not seem to be enough in the case to warrant the magistrate in issuing the paper asked for, and he turned the woman away to make peace with her neighbor.

SEVERE ATTACK OF GRIP.

"When I had an attack of the grip last winter (the second one) I actually cured myself with one bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Frank W.
Perry, editor of the Enterprise, Short-sville, N. Y. "This is the honest truth. I at first kept from coughing myself to pieces by taking a teaspoonful of this remedy, and when the coughing spell would come on at night I would take a dose and it seemed that in the briefest interval the cough would pass off and I would go to sleep perfectly free from cough and its accompanying pains. To say that the remedy acted as a most agreeable surprise is putting it very mildly. I had no idea that it would or could knock out the grip, simply because I had never tried it for such a purpose, but it did, and it seemed with the second attack of coughing the remedy caused it to not only be less of duration, but the pains were far less severe, and I had not used the contents of one bottle before Mr. Grip had bid me adieu." For sale by G. C. Stone.

A MYSTERY OF FORT FISHER

[Original]
One of the unsolved problems of the storming of Fort Fisher related to Commander Hervey. It will be remembered that there was a naval attack by bluejackets which was repulsed with considerable loss. Hervey's body was found in a depression in the sand in the extreme advanced position reached by his men of the Junata. A handkerchief (not Hervey's) had been used for a tourniquet to stop the flow of blood from the commander's left ankle, which had been shattered and the artery cut by a rifle ball. The wounded man must have been killed subsequently by a fragment of a shell which had struck him in the head.
Who had saved the captain in the first instance? It must have been some one who had been killed in the action, for no one claimed the credit.
Some time before the Junata, which Hervey commanded, joined the fleet she was refitted at the Portsmouth navy yard. Commander Hervey's family were there in one of the officers' residences, including his daughter, Irene, a girl of seventeen. There was a petty officer—not commissioned, but an enlisted man—named Edgar Fortistall, who was coxswain of the captain's dingy. He used to carry Irene in the dingy to and from the Junata.
On such occasions she sat in the stern of the boat beside the coxswain.
Though very young, she knew well the difference in station between enlisted men and officers and that it was not becoming to have anything to say to the coxswain. When any of her family, associates or officers were in the dingy, she never made a remark to young Fortistall, but when none of these was present she waxed quite friendly. Later Fortistall was in the action at Fort Fisher, was severely wounded and was promoted for bravery.
Ten years passed. One day Irene Hervey was present at the launching of a United States cruiser. A superintendent of one of the departments of the works that had built the vessel stepped up to her and asked her if she remembered him. She did not, and he informed her that he was the coxswain who used to carry her in her father's dingy to and from the Junata. Irene's face lighted up at once. She was especially pleased at meeting Fortistall as a citizen and not as an enlisted sailor.
"I have never seen you," she said, "since the Junata left us for the attack on Fort Fisher. I saw the notice of your promotion for bravery, however."
"Oh, everybody was brave on that occasion," said the young shipbuilder.
"But it is pleasant to be singled out from the throng."
At that moment the ship was launched and the remarks were interrupted. Nevertheless they were the beginning of a renewed acquaintance on a different basis from that of blue-jacket and captain's daughter. Irene had treasured a remembrance of the black eyed boy who used to sing out the orders to his oarsmen so lustily, though he had changed so much in appearance that she had not recognized him. The new man proved so attractive to her that her heart slipped into his possession. Then she was pleased that he offered her his own in exchange. But what was her delight when he opened the case of his watch and showed her a little lock of her hair that he had surreptitiously cut from her "pigtail" one morning when she was on his dingy.
They were engaged, and in time the day was set for the wedding, but, unfortunately, one evening when Irene was in a bad humor she let fall a remark indicating that she still had some of the feeling that a captain's daughter might have for a bluejacket. Fortistall at once broke the engagement. Irene when she had cooled longed to recall him, but it is not an easy thing for a woman thus to humble herself. So she plined and moped till her mother found something for her to do in getting up material for a biography of her father to be published with those of other naval officers who had fallen in the civil war.
She was thus engaged when she came upon a packet marked "Papers found on Commander Hervey's body." Opening it, she took out several letters, shuddering that they had been drenched in her father's blood, and examined them in turn. Suddenly she came upon a few scarcely legible words on the back of one of the letters scrawled with some blunt instrument, possibly a finger tip: "Coxswain saved me. They will hit me yet."
Like a flash from heaven the secret attending her father's death burst upon her. For years she had wondered who was the man who had carried her father to a less exposed position and had bound up his wound. Was he young or past middle life? Was he dark or fair? Why had fate deprived her of the satisfaction of taking his hand and expressing something of what she felt with her lips and her eyes?
And now she knew that this man was the young tar who had stolen a lock of her hair, whom she had wounded by a reference to their former relative positions.
"Come to me at once," she wrote. "I love the bluejacket better than the shipbuilder."
After the first transports of the meeting were over she said:
"Tell me, Edgar, why you kept the secret."
"It was because I loved you and knew that our stations were too far apart for you to return my love. I would not place you under an obligation nor be content with your thanks."
AUSTIN A. KINGSLEY.

Walter was a favorite among his as-

The funeral occurred from the late
